A REMARKABLE YACHT VOYAGE.—The St. Louis Republican of the 11th gave the following interesting statement:
The Jennie Bonnie, a little yacht commanded by Capt. Carpenter, arrived at this port at seven o'clock last evening from New Orleans in tow of the Mary Alice. Capt. Carpenter started over a year ago from the coast of Maine, and has made a voyage of over twenty-six thousand miles, including the survey of harbors and inlets, terminated by her arrival here. Every particular relating to this remarkable voyage is of interest.
About ten days since George Rea, president of the Mississippi Valley Transportation Company, was in New Orleans on business, when he was called upon by a gentleman of nautical appearance, who introduced himself as Capt. Carpenter, a retired United States naval officer.
The business of the captain was, he said, to inquire about the towing of a small yacht of six tons from New Orleans to St. Louis. Of course Mr. Rea gave the captain all the needed information, and the result is the arrival of the little yacht as stated. There are some very interesting facts connected with the voyages of this venturesome little craft.
Her crew consists only of the captain and a companion, who mess on board. As stated she started from the eastern coast of Maine over a year ago, and has taken a most circuitous route, up and down all the rivers and inlets of the Atlantic coast, until her arrival at New Orleans. At one time last season there was a terrific storm on the coast, when several vessels were wrecked. The little yacht weathered the tempest, riding over the big billows like a feather. The wrecks of six or seven merchantmen were discovered, tumbling about in the waves, but the yacht escaped unharmed.
The Jennie Bonnie will remain here a couple of days, when she goes to St. Paul, and thence across the grand portage to Lake Superior, through lakes Huron, Erie and Ontario, into the St. Lawrence, and around to the coast of Maine, to the point where she started from.
The object of the voyage, by Captain Carpenter is to obtain a correct survey of the contour of the continent between Maine and the mouth of the Mississippi, and also of the Mississippi river and the Illinois. Captain Carpenter, who, during his stay in the city is the guest of Mr. Rea, is a gentleman of superior cultivation, and has served in the navy with credit.
The Jennie Bonnie is a small, ketch-looking craft of six tons burden, with two masts, schooner rigged, and lies of the water like a skimming of fish.

MANAGEMENT OF POULTRY.—Warren Leland, proprietor of the Metropolitan Hotel, who keeps large numbers of poultry on his farm at Rye, N. Y., gives the following method of managing his poultry. It will interest those who think poultry can be made profitable when kept in large numbers:
I have found that for every hundred fowls you must give up at least one acre. But rough land is as good as any. Hens seldom love the bush, and I lop young trees, but leave a shred by which they live a year or more. These form hiding places and retreats for them. In such places they prefer to lay. I keep coal pieces, and it depends on three or four times a day observing which I believe a good thing can be made by those that do not. I give my fowls no grain. The insects they destroy belong to them exclusively. That the fowls have the range of another big lot, and that they can go half a mile or more from the house. The eighteen acres of poultry-yard is rough land, not fit for tillage. It has a pond in it, and many rocks, and bushes and weeds, and sandy patches, and ash heaps, and flag and bones and grass, and place which I plough up to give them worms. 2. When a hen has set, I take her box, throw out the straw and earth, let it be out in the sun and rain a few days, and give it a good coat of whitewash on both sides. In winter when it is very cold, I have an old stove in the house, and keep the warmth above freezing. There is also an open fireplace where I build a fire in cold wet days. They help themselves and when the hedges are out there is a bed of ashes for them to wallow in. Summer or winter my hens have all the lime, ashes and sand they want. Another reason why I have so much luck is because my poultry-yards receive all the scraps from the Metropolitan Hotel. Eggs being to me easy work, and hens will pick up much of it by about high feed. They need just what a man who gets requires—wheat bread and meat. Even when wheat costs two dollars, I believe in feeding it to hens. As to breeds, I prefer the Brahmas, light and dark. I change roosters every spring, and about as the farm has no other duty than to take care of my poultry. I frequently turn off 3,000 spring chickens in a single season. [Mainé Farmer.

BEES AND FRUIT BLOSSOMS.—E. Gallup, in the Western Pomological says that "the facts of the case are, that instead of the bees injuring the fruit blossom or crop in any case whatever, they are an absolute assistance. So much so, that in the immediate vicinity of an apiary in some seasons, there will be an abundance of fruit, whereas in localities where no bees were kept, there was comparatively little. The same of great assistance in fertilizing blossoms that otherwise (or left to nature) would not become fertilized, and the clover or buckwheat patch that produces the most honey, produces the most seed invariably. The honey in the blossom, if not taken out by the bees and other insects, would be dried up by the sun or washed away with rain, consequently would be a dead loss; but if we have bees to gather it, it is so much gain; not only to the owner, of the bees, but to the fruit grower and the farmer.

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL.

Gen. Fremont, wife and son are enjoying the ocean breezes down Portland harbor.

Additional failures have taken place in the Liverpool cotton trade.

Three companies of U. S. Artillery have been sent to Raleigh, N. C., to aid Gov. Holden in enforcing the laws of that State.

Hon. Cyrus W. Field of New York, one of the principal owners, and J. W. Glendenning, Esq., of New York, President of the Acadia Coal Co., have recently passed through Portland on their way to Nova Scotia to visit their celebrated mine near Pictou.

John Bright is now reported as rapidly improving in health, although it is still doubtful if he can safely resume official labors. He has hitherto refrained from resigning his position to the Ministry solely in deference to the wishes of his colleagues.

A London telegram states that since the announcement of Mr. Motley's recall the manifestations of regret are most numerous among influential Americans and the friends of America in England. His removal gives pleasure to but old enemies there, but to no others. If Mr. Frelinghuysen declines, as has been telegraphed, Mr. Motley's restoration would be cordially welcomed.

The same of great assistance in fertilizing blossoms that otherwise (or left to nature) would not become fertilized, and the clover or buckwheat patch that produces the most honey, produces the most seed invariably. The honey in the blossom, if not taken out by the bees and other insects, would be dried up by the sun or washed away with rain, consequently would be a dead loss; but if we have bees to gather it, it is so much gain; not only to the owner, of the bees, but to the fruit grower and the farmer.

OUR CROP PROSPECTS.

The report of the Commissioner of Agriculture on the gathered and growing crops of the year throughout the United States, gives the following encouraging estimates of the prospects of our various staples.

The wheat crop at present threatens to fall short, the estimate for this year being 202,000,000 bushels against 250,000,000 last year, showing a deficiency of forth-eight million bushels. The Commissioner says, however, that "future reports of the condition at and after the harvest are still elements of the ultimate estimate," referring to harvests not yet gathered in or reported, and it is thought that, when full returns are received, the deficit will not exceed twenty million bushels, while we still have on hand a considerable portion of last year's crop, to swell the aggregate amount.

The increase in the breadth of Indian corn planted is greater than the decrease in the average of wheat. In the States of the great Northwest, the increase of acres planted in corn ranges from ten to twenty-five per cent, while the indications in those States "of a good crop have never been so general since the inauguration of the official crop returns." So that it is probable that the deficiency in the wheat crop will be more than counterbalanced by the increase in our yield of Indian corn, one of our most important staples of subsistence.

There is an increase in cotton, as compared with last year, of nearly a million of acres in the area planted, which on the average of a bale for an acre would give us an increase of a million bales, or in gross receipts an increase of a hundred millions of dollars, assuming that such is the general demand for the raw material that the average price will not be very much reduced by the addition of a million bales to the crop of last year as the average crop. The Commissioner, however, estimates the crop at 3,000,000 bales against 3,000,000 last year, giving an increase of half a million bales; but with as favorable a season as last year the crop may reach 4,000,000 bales.

The oat crop promises well; and with an increased area of planting of five per cent. devoted to tobacco, the prospect is fair for a handsome gain upon this cash article in our foreign exchanges. The French and Germans must have tobacco whether in war or peace, and in war times will consume more rather than less.

The apple crop promises an unusual yield of fine quality. Peaches are less abundant, and grapes promise a good average. The report gives no figures on the potato crop, but the indications from different sections are favorable to a large yield.

Upon the whole, the crop prospects are unusually promising, and without some unforeseen disaster, we shall have a valuable surplus of breadstuffs to meet the foreign demand, and half a million or more bales of cotton, which with our tobacco crop will go far toward squaring the balance of our European trade. With our neutral position and the immense resources at our command we can enjoy in these eventful times an enviable prosperity at home and a credit and influence abroad second to that of no other nation.

THE PROPOSED FRANCO-PRUSSIAN TREATY.
THE FEELING IN ENGLAND.

A dispatch from London, Tuesday morning, gives the following account of the indignation manifested by the English people at the alleged secret treaty proposed France to Prussia, the substance of which we recently published:

The English feeling has been profoundly moved by the publication by The Times of the proposed treaty between France and Prussia. The grave urgency with which Mr. Bistraw in the House of Commons Monday afternoon questioned the Government, justly reflected the general emotion. The conversation among members turned on no other topic. Mr. Gladstone's reply, while declining absolutely to commit the Government to any opinion or declaration whatever, believed in the manner more than in the words, an unmistakable apprehension that the document might prove authentic. His answer was given with a pale face and hesitating lips, and when he sat down the House felt that England's relation with the continental trouble had grown suddenly close if not alarming. To the mention of Belgium the House responded with an unwonted thrill of sympathy and a clear recognition of England's obligations to protect her.

It is understood that immediate communications were made by the Government, to its agents at Berlin and Paris and that the French Government will have an instant opportunity to admit or deny its responsibility for the alleged treaty. It is believed here that in any case, its proposals are French, while its rejection is due to Prussia. The copy published in The Times is thought to have been supplied from Berlin. It is certain that The Times would not have published it unless evidence deemed conclusive

It is said privately this afternoon in the House that a copy was originally offered to Earl Granville, but that he refused it. The English Government preferring its suppression. It is supposed to be an allusion to the same subject in Mr. Cardwell's answer to the question in the House about breech-loaders, saying that great importance was attached to the best guns being immediately supplied to all the troops.

The Daily News, which has brilliantly led the opinion of England on the war question, says: "It is impossible not to admit that the gravity of the present European crisis has for all neutral nations been immensely increased by the publication of the proposed treaty: it completely expresses what everybody believed to be the favorite policy and cherished design of the French Emperor. It is also a secret treaty against England, in its offer of a league, offensive and defensive. As to its genuineness, the public may be asked to suspend their judgment, since Mr. Gladstone and the Earl of Granville say that the two governments concerned will be compelled to speak. Supposing it was really proposed by France to Prussia, our Imperial friend must only be presented in an aspect not calculated to win back English sympathy with his cousin. Napoleon was ready, no doubt, to throw over our alliance for a better one, but to, in effect, at any moment by a military advance into Belgium, not only its direct infraction of our friendship to the defiance, of our power. It is difficult to believe that there was so much bad faith. Did Prussia also listen to such proposal? There is a certain incoherence of tone toward Prussia in the document, suggesting that it was a kind of ultimatum. No real engagement was held out to Prussia, Meanwhile the whole political interest of moment is concentrated on this publication. We should be glad to have the completest assur-

[illegible] that such proposal has been known to Charles H. and D. Barrell in Turner, was struck by lightning and consumed together with the dwelling house. Two horses were in the barn, one of which was killed by the smoke and the other burned. Loss about $10,000. Insured $1,400. The barn of John G. Swett at South Paris was also destroyed by lightning.

—The Portland Press learns that Murdock Morrison, a Scotchman from Canada, in stepping off a car on the gravel train, about two miles below Mechanic Falls, had his leg crushed to atoms, just below the knee, on Friday. His leg was amputatdd, but the injury was so great that he died Friday, at midnight.

—The Argus says that Mr. Henry Rowe, architect and builder, in Portland, died suddenly Friday afternoon, after an illness of only 12 hours. On Thursday he was about his business in his usual health. He drank a great deal of ice water during the heat of the day, which brought on an attack of cholera morbus.

—The Bath Times says: We gave an account of the probable drowning of two young ladies at Westport, which proves to be not the case. It appears that after dragging the river and exploring the shores without success, the search was continued farther down the stream, when the interesting females were seen to emerge from a house and take to the woods, evidently neither having been drowned, nor up to the present having been caught.

—Mrs. Connor of Lewiston, was run over and badly injured by a rapidly driven team on Thursday, says the Journal.

—The Belfast Journal says that a few weeks ago Mr J. H. West, while at work on Moose Horn Bridge, in Brooksport, was very badly injured, while replacing some heavy stones at the bottom of one of the abutments, while at work below, a carriage passed over, giving the bridge so much of a jar as to cause the abutment to spread and fall. Mr. West was badly crushed by the rocks. His injuries are internal and doubts are entertained of his recovery.

—The Belfast Journal says that two dealers in "Prize Candy" took a sudden departure from Rockland the other day, much to the disgust of their creditors, among whom was the Gazette man, who had a bill of about forty dollars for printing. Hearing that the parties were in Belfast, the Gazette man started in pursuit armed with a special writ, and succeeded in obtaining from them the full amount.

—A correspondent of the Belfast Journal writes that Messrs. Russell & Edwards, who had leased the Park at Rockland for the season, very suddenly took their departure for parts unknown, taking with them the proceeds of the trot which took place there on the Fourth, without notifying the proprietors, or other creditors of their intention. One of them was arrested in Lewiston upon a warrant, for taking and carrying away a gig belonging to Mr. Gay, and brought back to Rockland. After settling the matter of the gig, he was arrested on several special writs and made to fork over what little funds he had about him, to satisfy the longings of his creditors.

—We see by the Gospel Banner that there will be a centenary meeting under the auspices of the Universalist church in Gardiner on the 31st inst.

—The annual meeting of the Trustees of the Maine Central Institute was held at Pittsfield, Wednesday evening, the 20th. Vacancies in the Board were filled by the election of John Twitchell of Plymouth, Hon H. Williamson Starks, Rev. J. S. Burgess and A. M. Jones, Lewiston, and Rev. C. F. Penney of Augusta. N. F. Weymouth was chosen Secretary, in place of Mr. Foss, resigned. A. L. Gerrish, N. F. Weymouth, J. C. Connor, R. W. Files, and John Twitchell were chosen Executive Committee. The Normal Department required by the State will be organized next term.

The Blood in Summer.

The blood deteriorates in hot weather. Prof. Holloway's Pills purify the blood as nothing else can. They cleanse the stomach and bowels, and thus remove the whole of the lodgment of the hot season. They clear away from the ordinary supply of the digestive organs; they do their work thoroughly and the food eaten is not poisoned by the decomposition. They do their work effectually, and the blood is thus made pure and rich, and the whole system is invigorated. Take the directions with each box and follow them strictly, and the health will be restored. Holloway's Pills purify the blood, and thus remove the cause of disease. Make the digestive and assimilative organs perform their functions proper

THE WAR IN EUROPE.

Austrian Neutrality Proclaimed.

KING WILLIAM'S MANIFESTO

England Excited over the Secret Treaty.

ANOTHER SKIRMISH NEAR THE BORDER

OUR ARMY ORDERED OUT OF ANTWERP HARBOR.

Denmark Neutral.

DEPARTURE OF THE CENT GARDES—PROCLAMATION OF AUSTRIAN NEUTRALITY—MANIFESTO OF KING WILLIAM

PARIS, July 25th—Midnight. The Minister of Prussia at Stuttgart, was insulted before his departure, by the populace

Many priests have voluntiered as Chaplain in the army The Cent Gardes left Paris early this morning

The Patrie Journal says the Minister of the Interior has addressed a circular to all Prefects, assuring them that whenever information reaches the Government from the seat of war it will be furnished to them by telegraph and that in the absence of such advice they will consider that no news of importance has been received and to take no notice of the rumors that may prevail. The Minister has also ordered the Prefects to make preparations for the reception and care of the wounded

Austria has issued a proclamation of neutrality similar to that made by Russia

Berlin, July 25 The Official Journal publishes a manifesto from King William, thanking the people for unanimous expressions in favor of German unity and independence, received from all parts of Germany and even from America. The King pledges himself to act in accordance with the expressed wish of the people for the union of the entire Fatherland and for the elevation of its Princes and people—thus concluding all opposition It goes on to say that the just rights and unity of Germany is a new assurance that she was called to a durable peace and to the completion of German unity and independence."

FRENCH PATRIOTISM SUBSIDING

London July 26 A Paris special correspondent to the London News, writes Sunday evening, "Never has a war been undertaken by France with less enthusiasm or more distrust of success The crowds on the Boulevards who were ready to die for their country have disappeared Troops are marching through Paris to take trains for the seat of war and they traverse the streets without exciting a single cheer Soldiers joining their regiments walk about in groups, almost all of them drunk and the bourgeois stare at them and shrug their shoulders The aspect of Paris could not be more melancholy if the Prussians were at the gates of the city"

EXCITED FEELING IN ENGLAND—THE FRENCH CHANNEL FLEET

London, 26—The excitement occasioned by the publication of the secret treaty between France and Prussia is increasing as the evidence becomes more clear that the treaty originated Nearly all the Journals have editorial remarks on the subject, and all in a similar tone France must explain this offensive treaty" are the words of the Times and the Daily News of this London press There is no question but that the press, the Times particularly is seeking to make Austria a pretext for the intervention of England in favor of Prussia.

The attitude of Ireland is also commented upon After giving the details of many meetings recently held in Ireland and the strong resolution of sympathy for France adopted the Times says it is the sympathy is altogether due to Catholicism and the hatred of Orange Protestantism

Dover 26th—Nine French Frigates under full steam passed this point to the Eastward the yesterday afternoon

ANOTHER SKIRMISH

Paris, 26th—The Journal Officiel this morning says that Marshal Leboeuf late last night telegraphed to the Emperor that General Bataille had repulsed a reconnoissance of the enemy near Sidebrun 9km Kilometres north-west of Strisbourg One officer (Austrian) was killed and two were made prisoners The Figaro insists that the officer killed was an Englishman

TWO AMERICAN SQUADRON ORDERED AWAY FROM ANTWERP—TRANSPORTING DUNDOLTS OVERLAND

London, 26th—The Government of Belgium has ordered from Antwerp the detachment of the American squadron, rendezvous ed there to watch the events in the North Sea and the Baltic Its commander was informed that the neutrality of Belgium forbade the presence of a foreign squadron in that harbor

Several French cruisers were reported off Wick, Scotland, to-day

The news received by the way of Berlin is very meagre, and the telegraphs are closely watched by the German authorities

Frankfort on the Main has been designated as the Prussian headquarters

Paris, 26th—French gun-boats, to operate on the Rhine and the rivers in Prussia are being transported from Marseilles in sections, ordered

POLICE ARRESTING PARIS—ANTICIPATED SUSPENSION OF SPECIE PAYMENTS

Paris 26th—Workmen are engaged this morning on the fortifications of Paris

The Bank of France will soon suspend specie payments Already it declines to pay out gold and redeems only in silver.

London 26th—The Prince of Wales has gone to Denmark to influence that country to keep a strict neutrality

The Prussian authorities, at Bismarck's earnest request, will allow newspaper correspondents to follow the army

Russians are concentrating a large force at Mayence

The use of balloons will be made for observation on the recommendation of American officers in the Prussian camp

There is unusual activity in all the dockyards of England to-day

Strategist writes to the Times to-day, showing that the Emperor Napoleon will most probably try to force his way into the old Kingdom of Hanover

THE SECRET TREATY AGAIN—DENMARK NEUTRAL

London, 26th—Earl Granville in the House of Lords to-day again referred to the secret treaty alleged to have been proposed by France to Prussia. He said he had an interview this afternoon with the French Ambassador, and the latter told him that the treaty originated with Count Bismark, and that it never had a second basis and was rejected by both Houses The Ambassador protested that France was actuated by motives of maintaining peace with Belgium, England and Holland

Mr Gladstone informed the Houses that advices from Berlin, settling the authenticity of the Times' information regarding the alleged treaty, were hourly expected

The attitude of Ireland is also commented upon After giving the details of many meetings recently held in Ireland and the strong resolution of sympathy for France adopted the Times says it is the sympathy is altogether due to Catholicism and the hatred of Orange Protestantism

Mr Gladstone informed the Houses that advices from Berlin, settling the authenticity of the Times' information regarding the alleged treaty, were hourly expected

The British Minister at Berlin telegraphed that a despatch containing the original propositions of Napoleon embodied in the treaty, existed in Count Benedetti's own hand writing.

Mr Otway, Under Foreign Secretary, declined when asked to make any communication or express any opinion on the proposal made by Napoleon to annex Holland.

Copenhagen, 26th—The Government of Denmark has issued a proclamation of neutrality in the war between Prussia and France. Aforesaid pilots, subjects of Denmark, are warned against rendering assistance to the belligerents.

London, 26th—To-morrow is the day for stock settlements, and in the present convulsed condition of the markets, failures are anticipated

Paris 26th—A council of Ministers was held at St. Cloud to-day, the Emperor presiding.

The Paris press complains of the extreme rigor with which Frenchmen in Germany are treated, while Germans in France are in no way molested or restricted.

La Liberte reports that the Empress says that the only end the war can have is a victory for France.

La Liberte announces that an Journal Officiel will publish to-morrow the correspondence between the French and Italian Governments, which the first steps were taken for the solution of the question of the occupation of Rome La Liberte promises that these documents will create a sensation, and they show that the Italian Government was not even asked for the withdrawal of the French troops, but France has taken the initiative to that end."

FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON July 26

Secretary Fish has addressed a formal letter to Baron Gerolt, the Prussian Minister, expressing the gratification of this Government at the determination, publicly announced, of King William to exempt from seizure on the high seas in the incoming war, the private property of the belligerents, unless contraband of war Mr. Fish shows at length that we have been the early policy of this Government subsequently adhered to and reaffirmed by President Pierce and Secretary Marcy, and later by Secretary Seward

Baron Gerolt has received the following despatch from his government

Public opinion in England is favorable to Germany, but the Government is not so—the acts with the neutrality law against North Germany, as she did against Austria with the Alabama."

DISASTERS

—We hear of a sharp game played by one of our hackmen a day or two since. On the arrival of the Maine Central train from the West, he found two ladies, strangers, who wished to go up on the P. & K. A train, and told them he could take them to the station of that road in a few minutes. So instead of waiting for the E. & N. A train he took them to the Exchange St. station and got on board just as the train was leaving—the sharp hackman thus gaining two fares

AN ODD CUSTOMER. A muscular chap, who will not divulge his name and whom nobody appears to know, got full of whiskey yesterday afternoon, and went on a tear, spelling for mischief Entering Packard's barber shop on Pickering Square, he seized a razor, and inflicted some ugly gashes upon the hand and arm of Thomas Dolan, and then took a "header" out of the shop window to the sidewalk, badly cutting his own face and hands with the broken glass The police soon gobbled him and he now lies in the lockup Dolan's wounds, which are severe, were dressed by Dr Brown

DEDICATION OF A CHURCH EDIFICE—The house of worship of the Elm Street Congregational Church, Camden, has recently been enlarged and beautified, and on last Sabbath, July, 24th, it was dedicated. The services were held in the forenoon, and notwithstanding the extreme heat of the day, the house was crowded, settees in the aisles being filled as well as the pews The services were introduced by reading of the Scriptures, prayer and singing The sermon was preached by Rev S P Fay of Bangor Text Psalms 118, 20. We have blessed you out of the house of the Lord" Dedicatory prayer by Rev J. D Adams of Searsport The pastor read a portion of Psalms and made a statement in respect to the improvements made in the house, among which were four facts that were peculiarly gratifying, and we might say unitural 1—The cost was within the estimate made 2—The house was ready for dedication at the time appointed 3—The completion of the work in neatness, efficiency and beauty was beyond the first expectation 4—Every dollar of the costs is paid

In the evening Rev Mr. Fay preached to a full house, by request, on the Pilgrim Fathers

THE

Central Railroad, of Iowa,

235 MILES IN LENGTH,

NOW NEARLY COMPLETED.

This Company are now pushing their work forward with great rapidity, and the entire line necessary to connect St Louis and St Paul is graded and under contract to be finished in season That this enterprise has been undertaken by a combination of leading bankers and railroad capitalists of well known wealth, experience, and ability, is quite its early completion and future success

The road runs through the richest and most thickly settled portion of Iowa and is built in the interests of the great Northern system of roads which centre at St Paul The

of the Company pay 7 per cents Gold Interest, free of Government tax, and are issued for 40 only small amount of $10 000 per mile For the present the amount portion are offered at 95 and accrued interest The attention of investors is invited to the fact that the road is now nearly finished, and that the Security is therefore entitled to a high rank

In our opinion, no class of investments has been found so uniformly safe and profitable as First Mortgages on completed railroads

Or 235 completed operating 20 000 miles of railroad in 6 Northern and Western States, on which there is a bonded debt of $662,000,000, we have but two that do not pay their interest regularly.

We believe there will be no more favorable time to sell Government, and buy really First-class Railroad Securities—such as these—than the present

THE OCEAN TELEGRAPH.

By John G. Whittier.

The following are the extracts from Whittier's "Tent on the Beach," quoted by Mr. D. G. Heath in his address on "The moral influence of the Telegraph," before the Rhetorical Society of the Theological Seminary, Monday evening:

From world to world God's couriers fly;
Through wingless seas that quail with fear
The angel of His stormy sky,
Rides down the sunken wire.

What saith the herald of the Lord?
"The world's long strife is done;
Clos'd' wedded by that mystic cord,
Its continents are one."

"And one in hope and one in blood
Shall all her people be,
The hands of human brotherhood
Are clasped between the sea."

Throb on, strong pulse of thunder! beat
From answering beach to beach;
Fuse nations in thy steady heat,
And melt the chains of each.

Weave on, swift shuttle of the Lord,
Beneath this deep so far,
The bridal robe of earth's accord,
The funeral shroud of war!

For lo! the fate of Ocean's will,
Space mocked, and time out-run,
And round the world the thought of all
Is as the thought of one!

The poles unite, the zones agree,
The tongues of striving echoe:
As on the Sea of Galilee
The Christ is whispering—Peace!

A STORY OF THE WAR.

HEARTH AND HOME.

Concluded.

"Shall I tell my adventure?"

"Why, no should think! kind o' hard of yer if you didn't," replied Mr. Paulks.

"Well, then, It all happened during the time that Phil Sheridan and Early were playing 'hide and seek' in the Shenandoah Valley. You doubtless remember the lively time that valiant soldier, with his band of ragged followers, made in getting home from Winchester! I did, for you see, as curious as it may seem, this handsome figure of mine was exposed to several showers of bullets. However, I don't care to indulge in the foolish fancy that I was of any service to the Union, for the very excellent reason that I was a rebel and—"

"Hold up there, old comrade," said his companion, "you are getting on decidedly delicate ground, besides taking the risk of being shown out of the house, and, considering the state of the weather, that wouldn't be at all comfortable."

"No, no, go on! I dare say you are a brave man, whichever side you wish to be," replied Mother Paulks.

"Thank you for the compliment," said the smooth-faced youth, dipped the nib-ink to old whiskers, who chuckled and hawked and fooled with his beard to keep from laughing.

"As it makes no particular difference to any excepting the venerable sergeant, I'll let myself pass as a rebel, and proceed with my narrative. I'm a Johnny Reb. That is, I had the misfortune (which is not the only fortune the war thrust upon me) to be in their lines at Winchester, and as my safety depended upon my principles, why, I was just a good upstanding Southern gentleman to espouse their cause and become 'one of 'em' without any of the pomp and circumstance of war, attending my transfer from one of those to one of these.' There, now, if I am not a rebel, what am I?"

"Why, young fellow, I don't comprehend all your high-falutin on the 'pomp of war,' but then, as candid opinion compels me to say that I should think that you were a rebel once, anyhow," replied the old farmer, who seemed to take a queer and somewhat sudden fancy to the sentimental youth.

"That's what I thought! Well, then, my friend here is one of those queer, masquerading sort of fellows who isn't and from force of habit never can be satisfied with the ordinary, steady, right-line way of doing things, but will do a man to pronounce and a reputation for good judgment."

"Just like one John," added mother.

The soldiers winked slyly.

"So one dark night, while in front, he had the audacity to go beyond the Union lines to visit a woman with whom he had fallen in love during a former campaign, and whom, he thought he had good and sufficient reasons to believe loved him as only those can love who have met by chance and have been obliged, by cruel circumstances beyond their immediate control, to part at hour's warning."

"That's good for you," interposed the sergeant, blacking his out of the 'gottee pearer, the binding fire."

"The victim of which I am speaking was dark and gloomy, just as the weather which an enthusiastic lover would leave his cautious in camp, and fancy Johnny Rebtalking his of peace by his comfortable camp-fire. However, all signs fail in war, as in love, you cannot estimate your loss until the battle has been fought and the smoke of battle has cleared away. But to my friend. He found himself caught at last, like the old fox in the fable."

"I decidedly object," muttered the sergeant, who was evidently a good deal embarrassed over the thickness with which disguised was spreading his little adventure."

"Well, then, as good as caught, if that suits your modesty any better."

"Thanks, on for the correction."

"While he was courting the object of his affection, a rebel mine rifle into the enemy's lines, and fancying himself secure from his self-without and discord within, a loitering band of Mr. Morgan's gentlemanly bravos had the cool impudence to surround the house and demand the unconditional surrender of its inmates."

CHAPTER II.

The accidental excitement attending the capture of this narration caused that perspiration to ooze out in large drops on Mr. Paulk's forehead, and his nerves to become so uncontrollable that it was with some difficulty he retained himself composedly in his chair.

"The prospect of his getting out of this perplexed situation," continued the young man, "with a whole skin and in a condition to continue in the Union front were anything but flattering; while the probability that death, or the worse fate of captivity, would ensue, was almost certain. My friend, however, was equal to the emergency. You see, he had been in tight places before and come out whole; why should he this time? It didn't take him long to decide what to do. He had left his horse in a grove near the garden. If he could but reach him and get securely into the saddle, he had a chance, such as it was, of regaining his camp-fire. In the meantime, Morgan's followers were clamorous for admission to the house, and had hinted in words more forcible than polite, that unless their request was immediately granted the door would be smashed in and confiscation and death follow."

"What did you do, then?" queried Mrs. Paulks, who had become greatly agitated.

Her question was addressed to the man with the full beard, but the answer came from the smooth-faced young fellow who was rehearsing the adventure, and who apparently didn't propose to allow the sergeant to compromise him by modifying any of his statements.

"Why, he opened the door and calling upon an imaginary squad to follow him faced the intruders. But then it so happened that these gentry were all hands in the business and didn't believe in numbers unless they could count them face to face. They were not to be caught with that sort of chaff, consequently they faced the music, and my companion found himself in the immediate presence of a group of bayonets, behind which could be observed the ragged ruffians belonging to the Confederate army."

Mrs. Paulks drew a long breath, put her knitting-work on the table and folded her arms; while Mr. Paulks turned and twisted nervously in his chair, and, by way of momentary relief, gave the stove tremendous shaking up.

"It was madness to attempt to pass them," continued the speaker, "and folly to retreat. However, there was no time to consider. Death stared him in the face. He must act promptly or all was lost and his campaign at an inglorious end."

"And then?" sighed Mrs. Paulks.

"He made a sudden thrust with his sabre, threw up the glistening bayonets and rushed furiously upon them. It was quick work! One fell at the first stroke, another received an ugly wound in the shoulder, while the third fell back confused, and for the moment stunned. The attack was so unexpected that the rebels did not regain their lost prestige, until my friend was in his saddle and over the garden fence into the highway."

The old farmer rose suddenly to his feet. He was so excited that he could hardly contain himself for the remainder of the story.

A valley from the wounded men's companions who had meanwhile come to the rescue, followed him, but without apparent effect. He was off to the Union lines."

"But my story does not end here," continued the youth. "Shall I continue?"

"Sartin, sartin! go on" said the old farmer excitedly.

CHAPTER IV.

The infuriated rebels were so chagrined and maddened that they hurriedly gathered up their wounded companions, set the house on fire and rode away, cursing their luck and swearing vengeance on the first Union man that fell into their hands."

"That's the scene I'm coming to," replied the speaker. "When the house was set on fire the lady escaped through a rear door and followed in the direction her lover had taken. She had not gone far, however, before she discovered, to her horror and dismay, the object of her affections lying prostrate in the road with an ugly rifle-wound in the arm, from which the blood flowed freely. What could they do? What would others have done under similar circumstances? They were puzzled but for an instant. Necessity, is the mother of invention. It was useless to think of regaining the Union lines, and the rebel lines were unsafe. A sudden impulse, and the lady stripped the dead rebel, stripped him of his rugged uniform, and transferred it to her lover. This accomplished, and the task was comparatively easy one. She carried him in her arms to the nearest house, there was a rambling, crooked story of how he had served in more than a score of Confederate battles, of how he had been shot by a Union scout, who had fired the farm-house just to consumed, claimed protection, and finally compelled the country old gentleman, by presenting a pistol to his head, to take them in."

"What became of him? Did he die?" Mrs. Paulks was anxious.

"No. In a day or two Phil Sheridan took that famous twenty-mile ride to Winchester, and the lady's friend, Early, went back through the valley as though propelled by a whirlwind. In Mr. Early's sudden and somewhat hasty departure the lovers were again under the folds of the Union flag, and once more citizens of the republic. They came North, and—"

"Did the sergeant marry her?" was Mrs. Paulks's positive question, forgetting that the subject of the adventure was before her.

"Yes—yes—they were married."

"Oh, that's easily enough told. They no sooner met—"

"Showed up."

"Yes."

"But at home," added the sergeant. "The soldier to claim the old allegiance of a father and mother, and to have the same bounty from a daughter?"

The beardless youth threw off an old slouched hat and the buffalo-skin coat in which he had concealed himself, and stood before the surprised people—a woman!

It required no arguments to convince them that John had really come home. They were in the speechless ecstasy of a new found joy. True enough, it was, John! There was no mistaking him! That welcome was from the heart—warm, tender and earnest. Questions were asked and answered in rapid succession, and Johnny rebel, who kissed and hugged much her strength became nearly exhausted.

CHAPTER V.

Up the chimney the sparks were whirling and frolicking in crazy delight, as if they did not have a care in the world, and as if their laughing, flashing lives would last forever and never be one whit less happy and bright than at that moment. And yet, without, in the open air, shrieking fury was ready to receive them—old Father Winter, with his white face his white form and his white head, from which his beard hung down in icicles!

The snowy elves were moving lively about, tossing their white spray against the windows, and whirling over the chimney tops and the smoky, plain and through the misty night air, with dark mutterings, and whoo they came near the chimney, whose soft, ruddy glare made the white night whiter by contrast, then glided off in terror, and looked with eyes of fear upon the warm, spiral column ascending to the skies. Never a thought did the dainty sparks of ice bestow upon the lonely rambler and scrambler about the outstanding chimney, whispering secrets in each other's ears and flying other, one another in mad delight. Ah, but wonderful secrets did they tell, and what love tales did they whisper as they sparkled and made merry with the swirling elements? "Listen!" they sang, as they leaped over one another and dodged about and hid themselves in the prettier little nooks, and crannies. "Listen! listen!" the song, as they peeped out of their hiding-places and looked cautiously down and upward. "Listen! listen! listen!" repeated the wind, coming down the flues. "Love's love below! There is content below! Every word you hear is clothed in tenderness. Listen! listen! Such home has ended all fretting! Listen! listen! listen!" And so they would have kept on the whole night through, had not you and I been there to join in the happy reunion at the old Hearth and Home.

MONEY FOR LIVERPOOL.—The personal economic English man of the continent tells us again this week in Paris, says the London Observer of the 9th, and the vindictive Parisian journalists have run him to earth in Switzerland. According to the latter day's information he is engaged in organizing a banking concern, with ample money and assembly, offered to him if he will be willing to take part with the burst but being tempted, little by one and then by two gold pieces, he at last consented to sell it, and the English man walked off with his purchase. He had not gone many yards when he found the pleasant Henry IV's statue a thing even suddenly perceived that an Irish organ boy carrying large monkey and assembly
